	age Un On the wh	e former Soviet military officer credit with averting nuclear Armageddon has died at e 77. It was in the middle of the "Cold War", when relationships between Soviet ion and USA were awfully awesome. September 26, 1983, shortly after midnight, Stanislav Petrov, a lieutenant colonel in a Soviet Air Defence Forces, was the duty officer at a Soviet Union's military centre, en the computer signaled that five American nuclear missiles were rushing towards ascow.
	ne machine indicated the information was of the highest certainty," he later recalled. In the wall big red letters burnt the word: START. That meant missiles had definitely en fired." He had just minutes to decide whether to assess the attack as genuine and orm the Kremlin that the United States was starting World War Three – or tell his mmanders that the Soviet Union's early warning system was faulty. The Soviet vernment's policy, in fact, in the event of a US nuclear attack was to launch an Guessing that an actual American attack would be involved hundreds of missiles, and not just five, he put the alarm down to a chnical glitch. Later it was found that it was not exactly a matter of computer glitch. Wiet satellites had mistaken sunlight reflected on clouds for rocket engines. Col Petrov was fêted by his colleagues and initially praised by superiors for his splittened decision, but he was not rewarded by the government, embarrassed by such a lure of the warning system.

He took early retirement from the armed forces the following year and moved outside Moscow. The incident was only made public in 1998. In 2014 docufilm "the man who saved the world", Mr Petrov said: "All that happened didn't matter to me – it was my job. I was simply doing my job, and I was the right person at the right time, that's all."

1 What is a retaliatory attack?

- A. a sudden attack
- B. an unprovoked attack
- C. a punishment attack

What is the meaning of the sentence "He put the alarm down to a technical glitch"

- A. he did not take into consideration the routine instructions
- B. he thought the alarm was caused by a technical problem
- C. he found out that the alarm system had been misused

3 What was wrong with the Soviet satellite warning system?

- A. it had sensed a flight of birds as missiles
- B. it had sensed the sun as a missile
- C. it had sensed as missiles the cloud shapes reflected by the sun.

4 What does it mean that Petrov had to take a "split-second decision?"

- A. he had to make a very quick decision
- B. he had to judge the situation rapidly
- C. he had to change his decision quickly

5 Why was the reaction of the Soviet authorities ambiguous?

- A. they were embarrassed by Petrov's behaviour
- B. they felt vulnerable to attack because of their faulty system
- C. they felt ashamed of their staff incompetence
